For a long time, Bill and Maggie and their 2 children, 14-year-old Tammy and 13-year-old Jimmy couldn't agree on a family activity. Bill loves playing golf, and Maggie takes golf lessons, but she still can't hit a ball. Tammy finds golf boring and Jimmy thinks golf is geeky. Maggie adores ballroom dancing, and Bill tries very hard to be a good dancing partner, but he keeps stepping on her toes. Tammy thinks that ballroom dancing is for old folks and Jimmy can't agree more. Recently, a friend suggested a getaway weekend at a family campground near a lake. The family decided to give it a try and they were surprisingly delighted to find that there was an activity for everyone. Bill played golf while Maggie participated in dance classes. Jimmy learned to water-ski and Tammy played volleyball. The next day, they went horseback riding together as a family and hiked up the mountains. They enjoyed themselves so much that they decided to spend many summer weekends together at the campground. Now, the family agrees on a family activity.
